You want to grow, you want to find better, innovative ways of doing things, but you want to have them found in ways that are still respectful to the old way of doing things. You want someone who wants to learn but doesn't need to be taught. You want someone who doesn't know the limits yet, because that's someone who's thinking is already outside the box. You want someone just stubborn enough that they are passionate and hardworking even on the small things. You want someone who really cares about that they are doing. You want what I strive to be.
